

CARNEGIE PEACE PALACE CORNER- STONE IS LAID

Declared a Monument to the World's New Cult and a
Beacon to All.

HAGUE ENVOYS PRESIDE.

New York Millionaire Lauded
for His Gift and Praise
Given to the Czar.

THE HAGUE, July 29.—The foundation stone of the Andrew Carnegie Peace Palace was laid this afternoon at Zorgevliet, in the midst of the wooded park stretching from The Hague to Scheveningen, by M. Neidoff, President of the Second Peace Conference, and the inauguration of this monument which the American millionaire is raising to commemorate and carry on the work of the international peace conferences was marked by considerable ceremony.

Practically all the delegates attending the present peace conference, a number of high court officials, the members of the States-General, and delegations from numerous civil and municipal bodies were grouped around the stone which, when the structure is completed, will form the corner of the Grand Hall of Justice. Chieftained on this stone in the Roman characters there appears the following Latin inscription:

PACI
JUSTITIA FIRMATAE
HUIUS MONUMENTI
ANDREAE CARNEGIE
MUNIFICENTIA
DEDICAVIT

The ceremonies were opened with music and singing by a number of choral societies, after which M. A. P. C. Van Karnebeek, President of the Carnegie Foundation Committee, delivered an address in which he paid a tribute to the "generous man whose name is engraved upon the first stone of the edifice due to his munificence." The thoughts and the thanks of every one here went out to the speaker said, to Andrew Carnegie in his Scottish home. Then rapidly sketching the history of the Carnegie donation and describing the plans of the Peace Palace, which is proposed to be a monument to the peace of the world, he concluded his address with the following words:

"This is to be a palace of international justice founded as an outcome of the need of every civilized community to institute the rule of right for the rule of might. In this palace no one will be stronger or no one weaker than the other, and no one blade except the sword of justice, will be placed in the scabbard. The tower of the palace will point to the stars, indicating the ideal of our efforts."

In a speech that preceded the actual laying of the stone, the speaker expressed the gratitude of the peace delegates to the donor of the place and to the Government of the Netherlands for the gift of the land upon which the splendid edifice is to be erected. The speaker said: "The monument to the first efforts made by the governments of the world to preserve to the nations the benefits of peaceful development by seeking to prevent wars. Continuing, the speaker said he wished to emphasize the almost sacred character of the proposed building. It represented a new principle in the relations of people, namely, peace by justice and right. M. Neidoff then referred to the antiquity of the worship of war, and said there had never been a 'cult' of peace in the world. Of all the precepts preached by the Saviour nineteen hundred years ago the idea of peace had been the most neglected."

"To make this idea triumph and the honor thereof accrues to the Emperor of Russia—the governments of the world must agree to study in common a means of making universal peace a reality by seeking every possibility of securing its maintenance. I venture to say, M. Neidoff continued, 'that this new cult' has been established in the world, and it is Andrew Carnegie, inspired by the great humanitarian idea springing therefrom and the good it promises to the world, who conceived the idea of dedicating to this 'cult' a special edifice, which he is fully justified in calling a 'Temple of Peace.'"

"Let us wish that this 'cult' spread more and more, both among governments and peoples, and that the monumental tower which will crown this edifice with like a lighthouse, point out to the nations the road of right and justice."

Disappointment was felt that Queen Wilhelmina, who is at The Hague, was not present at the ceremonies, and it is reported that the real reason for her absence is to be found in a dispute which arose regarding the choice of a site for the palace. Real estate speculators are openly accused of having influenced the selection of the site at Zorgevliet.

FOUND WIFE HANGING IN CELLAR OF HOME.

(Special to The Evening World.)
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 30.—Mrs. Abbie Starkey, wife of William B. Starkey, a carpenter, of No. 23 Hall avenue, White Plains, was found hanging from a rafter in the cellar of her home to-day by her husband. For several months she has been acting in a strange manner and two doctors who had examined her a short time ago had come to the conclusion that she was mentally unbalanced.

Mrs. Starkey made a slip knot out of a piece of a clothline, placed the noose about her neck and, then standing on a high box, fastened one end of the rope to a rafter and jumped off.
